announced

CHAUCER IS to have a blue plaque on the Copyprints building in Talbot Yard.

The literary figure famous for The Canterbury Tales which feature Southwark, was supported by an international campaign rallied by Nick Pembury of Copyprints. The business was founded in Talbot Yard over 40 years ago by Jack Hames, who was present at the ceremony. John Wheeler Manager said: "It is brilliant that the campaign attracted individual votes from customers rather than from institutions".

Four out of the top five winners of the Southwark plaques are in SE1. The other three are Sam Wanamaker and his Globe; The Clink and Borough Market.

At the ceremony Zoe Wanamaker paid a tribute to her father, relieved at last that his old adversary Southwark Council was able to acknowledge, through the winning votes of nearly 4000 people, the strength of his vision and persistence.

The only non SE1 Blue Plaque went to playwright Oliver Goldsmith. Teachers at the Peckham school bearing his name had galvanised all the children into voting and initiated a huge interest in his works and writing in general.

The Blue Plaques will be soon appearing and nominations have opened for 3 new plaques for 2004 - see www.southwark.gov.uk

CAMRA award for Royal Oak

THE ROYAL Oak in Tabard Street has been named as Pub of the Year by South-East London CAMRA, the Campaign for Real Ale.

Landlord Frank Taylor received the framed award on the night that Southwark Court Leet assembled in the restored pub to approve the quality of the ale. This is the only pub in London belonging to Harvey's of Lewes and Head Brewer Miles Jenner was at the Royal Oak to offer congratulations. He is the fifth generation brewer descended from the lenners of Southwark who brewed London Stout for theatres and music halls. The CAMRA citation reads: "A friendly, traditional local with no jukebox, no fruit machine and no hassle." •44 Tabard Street

Blue plaque poll winners | Community Councils meet for first time in SE1

"HISTORY WILL reward you" Simon Hughes told the fifty residents who attended the first Borough & Bankside Community Council in Lant Street.

The MP, who said he had waited 25 years for this innovation, claimed that many who do not relate to the Town Hall will now be able to take part in local decision-making.

The meeting in Charles Dickens School discussed the positioning of 150 new litter bins and 40 new trees. Council Officer Tim England gave a short presentation on Crime and Grime highlighting how Southwark Cleaning is trying to tackle rubbish and graffiti problems.

Sarah Newton reported on crime figures which confirmed that SE1 has the highest crime rate in Southwark. Two Community Officers will be supporting the Police on Bankside from this month.

Planning applications will be considered at this month's meeting on Wednesday 4 June starting at 7pm. Borough & Bankside Community Council covers Cathedrals and Chaucer wards. Bermondsey's Community Council - for residents of Riverside, South Bermondsey and Grange wards – held its inaugural meeting at the end of May and meets again on Wednesday 18 June at Millpond Tenants and Residents Association Hall.

Sainsbury's sells up

SAINSBURY'S HAS sold Wakefield House and Rennie House to Land Securities for £38 million.

The properties, which back on to Christ Church Garden, face each other at the south end of Rennie Street. The sale by Sainsbury's, which moved its HQ to Holborn last year, includes 19/23 Blackfriars Road next to the Paper Moon pub and delapidated number 18.

Mark Collins of Land Securities Portfolio Management said "We are very keen on the South Bank since we believe that this location is going to improve substantially over the next few years and offers an ideal opportunity to provide quality office accommodation at a reasonable rent".

Sainsbury's retain ownership of the site on the north-east corner of the RennieStreet-Stamford Street crossroads where a supermarket is due to open.

Queen visits school

THE QUEEN has visited St Saviour's and St Olave's School as part of the school's centenary celebrations. The school, alongside the Bricklayers Arms flyover, was opened on the Old Kent Road in 1903 by the future George V, Elizabeth II's grandfather.

The Queen saw students at work on design and technology projects and sat on the platform during an assembly.

New arts club in Waterloo

THE ONLY house in Waterloo's Exton Street was built in 1901 so when it becomes an arts club for professional performing artists it will be called the 1901 Arts Club.

The plan is to provide members with a tranquil setting in central London to relax, eat and drink before and after performances and reflect the ambiance of a salon from the turn of the last century in cities such as Paris, Berlin and Vienna. It is hoped to encourage the art of conversation between noncommercial artists from all disciplines.

Unusually, club facilities are to be simple and affordable even to artists embarking on their careers. It is also expected that artists living in SE1 will wish to become members. The provisional opening date is early 2004.

Archbishop of Southwark to retire

THE ROMAN Catholic Archbishop of Southwark Michael Bowen is to retire two years early.

According to a spokesperson, the 73 year old Archbishop has made the decision because he is feeling tired and believes it is the right time to hand his responsibilities to a younger man.

Archbishop Bowen recently failed to persuade the Vatican to create a new diocese covering the Kent area of his large Southwark Diocese.

Pizza Express on Bankside

PIZZA EXPRESS is opening on Bankside this summer in Benbow House opposite Shakespeare's Globe.

This will be the fourth Pizza Express to open in SE1 and the largest. There are branches at Shad Thames, London Bridge and in Belvedere Road behind the Royal Festival Hall. The company, which once had a branch in Southwark Cathedral, is known to have been considering the Bankside site for at least two years.

Founder Peter Boizot tasted his first pizza in Florence in 1948 and in the 1960s he realised that the UK still lacked a good pizza restaurant. The first Pizza Express oven was brought from Rome along with an Italian to operate it and was set up in Wardour Street. In 1967 a second restaurant opened in an old dairy in Bloomsbury's Coptic Street.

Pizza Express was floated on the London Stock Exchange in February 1993. Three years later the restaurants, which were franchised, were bought back to give the Company greater control in ensuring the brand went from strength to strength. This has led to the total of over 300 restaurants in the UK and Ireland serving 16 million customers a year. Today Pizza Express also has restaurants in Barcelona, New Delhi, Tokyo and Paris.

Tas Pide opened last year in New Globe Walk.

5 ning Ning Collins London Street Atlas

DUE TO the Congestion Charge SE1 is recognised as being half of central London. No more will London maps omit the triangle of roads embracing St George's Circus.

Collins is first of the major mapping publishers to have a good quality street map on sale showing the Congestion Charge boundary. This means that most of SE1 is highlighted in grey with the Borough and Newington properly marked. The 376 page London Street Atlas: Small (Collins £4.50) has coverage from Harmondsworth in the west to Abbey Wood in the east and Enfield in the north to Croydon in the south. The scale for central London is a generous 6.3 inches to the mile allowing Milroy Walk, Marigold Alley, Hopton Gardens and Scovell Crescent to feature. It is also good to see Southwark Playhouse have a mention. Unfortunately the mappers have located St Alphege Church on its old site in Lancaster Street rather than King's Bench Street. www.inSE1.co.uk/books

TATE FLOOR CRISIS Tate Modern's success is causing problems. Acidic vapour from the oak floors is posing a risk to the artworks. Sculptures must be placed on plinths rather than sit directly on the floorboards for fear corrosive dust will cause irreparable damage. Architects insisted on untreated oak to "give unexpected sensuality to the rooms".

FALCON CLOSE

Falcon Close, off Sumner Street, is to be closed by Southwark Council. The short cul-de-sac takes its name from the Falcon Inn which stood at the riverside end of Holland Street from 1541 until 1808 when it made way for Falcon Drawdock, Falcon Close will make way for the St Christopher House development.

Richard II at Shakespeare's Globe

'REGIME CHANGE' is the topical title for the summer season at the Globe. The first play, Richard II, is a meditation on the duties and responsibilites of kingship.

The power games between Richard, played camply and vainly by energetic Mark Rylance and the tough plain speaking Bolingbroke, son of Richard's uncle John of Gaunt, (Liam Brennan), sow the seeds of the tragedy. The trio of strong parts is complemented by the comic but ineffectual Duke of York (Bill Stewart), thrust into power while Richard wages war in Ireland. The three women's parts are played successfully by men, especially the bossy Duchess of York.

The costumes are stunning, made from gorgeous Italian silks and velvets. The words are so well spoken that you forget it is 'difficult' Shakespeare and enjoy the clever word plays.

After the sombre final scenes of the murder of Richard and half the English nobles, the players regroup for a lively jig, enjoyed by cast and audience alike.

MARION MARPLES

AT THE Mad Hatter in Stamford Street food is available from lunchtime through to 9pm. The bars have an air of an old Victorian pub although the building is a former hat factory. Today tables for food are at the back with a surprisingly small smoke-free area. The Sky Sport screen is tantalisingly just out of view if you are eating.

The range of specials on the board changes every day. Soup of the day was pea and came with two thick chunks of bread on a wooden platter. The spinach and red pepper pie, in its own single portion dish, had much more pepper than spinach but it was near the end of the day. There was plenty of vinegar and mayonnaise to put on the hot thick chips.

The first two courses were filling but the still tempting puddings available included chocolate brownies with vanilla pod ice cream. A meal and a pint should leave change from £15. •3 Stamford Street

AN EXOTIC bird seems to have landed in Bermondsey Street. The orange and shocking pink building has been transformed by Mexican architect Ricardo Legorreta into a robust exhibition and education space for fashion designer Zandra Rhodes.

The launch exhibition is like

no other: 70 dresses chosen by the leading designers of the last two decades are displayed

on see through dummies,

suspended on gentle motors

which raise and lower them like clouds, occasionally giving a twirl. Each dress hangs in a shaft of light and is accompanied by a caption giving the rationale for the choice. These captions are also works of art; 23,000 letters,

handmade from strips of orange

polycarbon placed on speech

bubbles beneath each dress

and lit to read like a flourescent display. Zandra's own chosen

design is stunning, with fabric patterns based on Australia's

Ayers Rock: Jackie Onassis had one too in a different colourway.

Anjay Displays

redevelopment locally, some eccentricities still remain, thank goodness. One of these has to be Anjay Displays Ltd in Waterloo Road, a shop which has been established in SE1 for 50 years. Basically a supplier fittings, Anjay is a haven for the imaginative and those on limited incomes. Amongst its customers are the props departments of local theatres including the Old

Vic, fashion students and interior designers. Controversial artist

Tracey Emin, who used to have a studio in Waterloo Road, was not an infrequent visitor. Amongst the shop fittings are wonderful things like artificial grass by the metre, shop dummies of every shape and size. dress rails and sweater organisers (£9.95). The biggest seller is coat hangers

including the wire hangers so beloved of dry cleaners. At 10p

each they are a bargain and apparently make good TV aerials.

'THE POETRY Library is one of the occasional pure flowerings of the imagination for which the English are so seldom given credit:the creation of a public library devoted entirely to modern poetry' said Philip Larkin. Last month was the 50th anniversary of the Poetry Library, a unique and special resource based in the South Bank Centre. Poetry lovers shared in the celebration of this wondrous place -truly a jewel in the crown of SE1, at a Gala Evening of popular readings introduced by the poet laureate, Andrew Motion. Some of the most well loved poets writing today, Patience Agbabi, Carol Ann Duffy, Roger McGough, Billy Collins the US poet laureate and Sharon Olds shared their words. wit and wisdom with a capacity audience in the Queen Elizabeth Hall. The Poetry Library is one of those spaces that those who know and visit regularly can't fail to love. It has a comprehensive collection of modern poetry containing all 20th/21st century work published in the UK, a huge selection from other English-speaking countries and an unrivalled collection of translations. There is also a well resourced children's section.

The Hadrian's Wall Path has just been upgraded as a National Trail. Richard Wakeford, the Countryside Agency chief executive, says that it has taken seven years to link existing footpaths and bridleways to newly created paths. Where did all this start? Wakefield first started thinking about the route when he worked in Waterloo fifteen years ago. Popping out for sandwiches in The Cut he bought a second-hand book of photographs of the wall for 75p.

An exhibition worth crossing the Millennium Bridge for is at the Guildhall Art Gallery. Homage to the Working Thames brings together fifty years of paintings by Terry Scales. As recorded in his novel, Bermondsey Boys, he grew up in SE1. He attended Camberwell School of Art and worked in Surrey Docks. Terry will be at the gallery between 2pm and 3pm on Friday 6 June to discuss his work and memories. Admission £2.50; concessions £1.

David Starkey, curator of the Elizabeth I exhibition at Greenwich, says that Winchester Palace is one of the most inportant sites in London. So there is some concern about plans to knock down warehouses around the Winchester Square. This is the old courtvard of the palace, where guests included Katharine of Aragon and Mary I. The rose window of the hall where they dined survives in
