The Story of London

Local history is in the spotlight this month as organisations large and small take part in the Mayor's Story of London festival.

BFI Southbank's Mediatheque is presenting a special on-demand collection focusing on the boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark which embrace the city's incredible diversity, their often turbulent fortunes shaped by war, poverty and immigration.

The energy and excitement of Alexandra Day in Peckham (1913) is infectious and newsreel footage records a royal visit to Streatham in Queen Alexandra's Help (1916). Other extracts include Spirit of Lambeth (1962) and Rush Hour, a 1970 film about Waterloo Station.

Highlights from the Mediatheque's local collection are also being shown in a free programme called Beautiful South in BFI Southbank's Studio cinema at weekends in June.

On 18 June The Elephant in Time in NFT1 features rare footage of the Elephant & Castle in the 1920s, recently unearthed in the BFI National Archive (see listing on page 6). This event aims to tell the Elephant's story, bringing together architects, documentarists, historians and local residents.

Newsreel footage of the opening of County Hall on the South Bank is amongst the historic film of Lambeth and Southwark that can be seen at BFI Southbank's Mediatheque this month. Picture courtesy BFI.

Other local Story of London highlights include an opportunity to view the heritage centre at the Convent of Mercy in Parker's Row at Dockhead (page 3).

The London Fire Brigade Museum in Southwark Bridge Road – which was threatened with closure last year – is staging an open day to allow Londoners to see the collection without a prior appointment (see page 3).

The Story of London walking weekend on 6 and 7 June includes a wide variety of local tours including two led by local writer John Constable (see page 5).

The festival concludes with an architecture-themed weekend which includes a talk at the Fashion & Textile Museum by Antoni Malinowski on the use of colour in buildings (see page 4). His work includes the external colour scheme at Coin Street neighbourhood centre.

• Story of London events are listed throughout this issue.

Handywomen service Home Jane is holding a series of workshops for women and men interested in learning some basic skills to tackle DIY jobs at home. The course will cover the following topics and will run for 4 weeks on Tuesday evenings at Waterloo Action Centre:

Week 1 - Woodworking

Week 2 - Electrics

Week 3 - Decorating

Week 4 - Plumbing

Price is £120 for all 4 sessions or £40 for single session. To register or for further information please contact info@home-jane.co.uk or call 0845 832 36 39.www.home-jane.co.ukGot knowledge to share?Topolski Century is looking for intelligent and interested volunteers to work on an educational outreach project over the summer. The South Bank attraction needs people with an understanding of the 20th century to write short information pages about major events. Depending on expertise, these may have either a historical, political, citizenship or sociological theme. Other suggestions will also be considered. The information pages will be incorporated into educational packs for students aged 14-18 to develop an understanding of their subject. These will be included together with first-hand accounts of the events experienced from the eyes of artist and chronicler Feliks Topolski. Work may be done in your own time, as little or as much as you are able to take on. Email topolski@abipalmer.com for further details of the project.Befriending ServiceDo you know someone who is 65 years old or over, living in north Lambeth, who may like someone to visit them once a week for a cup of tea and a chat? Next month

July highlights include the London Bridge Festival, Colombianamente at the Coin Street Festival, Waterloo Carnival and the Festival of British Archaeology. Watch This Space, the National Theatre's annual open-air South Bank festival, also gets under way. Plus the RSPB's peregrine watch outside Tate Modern is due to start on 18 July. Look out for Tango dancers on local bridges and railway stations. And there will be free theatre performances in North Lambeth as part of the One Mile Away project. All that and more in the next issue which will be available from Wednesday 1 July.
