Nelson Mandela to visit Southwark

NELSON Mandela is to open Southwark Cathedral's new cloister buildings after a dedication service on Saturday 28 April.

The former South African President will also name a room in honour of Archbishop Desmond Tutu who once served in the Southwark Diocese.

"We are humbled and thrilled that Nelson Mandela, probably the most outstanding man of our times, has agreed to visit us and open these buildings" says Dean of Southwark Colin Slee. "He is renowned for his suffering, passion for justice and almost unimaginable compassion and forgiveness. It is not inappropriate that he should lend his support to Southwark Cathedral as our work is dedicated to expanding our ministry to an area that has always been outcast in terms of London's wealth, the place to which socially marginalised people have come for sanctuary and assistance."

The £10.2 million development is partly funded by a Millennium Lottery grant of £4.2 million. The appeal was launched in 1999 by Archbishop Tutu.

Shakespeare's birthday in SE1

TO MARK Shakespeare's birthday on Monday 23 April the Globe is holding a week-long celebration.

The festivities begin on Wednesday 18 April with Umabatha, the Zulu Macbeth, followed by Sweet Love Remember'd Sonnet Walks of Shakespearean surprises. On Shakespeare's birthday there is a concert at 3pm at Southwark Cathedral featuring Rick Jones (counter tenor) and Arthur Smith (reader) in a programme inspired by Shakespeare's plays and in the evening the Spearshaker Talk.

During the Sonnet Walks on Sunday 22 April twelve disguised sonneteers surprise walkers along the route, blending into the background of London life only to emerge as the sonnet walkers pass. The walks start at Shoreditch, where the Globe was first built, and at Shakespeare's memorial at Westminster Abbey. Walks set off from both venues every 15 minutes from 10am to 12.45pm and end at the Globe on Bankside. Box Office: 020 7401 9919

Festival of Britain: 50 years on

A VISIT by Princess Alexandra to St John's Waterloo marks the beginning of the Festival of Britain 50th anniversary celebrations.

The church, bombed in the war, re-opened in April 1951 as the Festival of Britain church just a month ahead of the opening of the exhibition which also gave us the Royal Festival Hall.

The Princess is attending an anniversary service at St John's at noon on Thursday 5 April to be followed by the opening of the Waterloo Garden of Remembrance.

The Festival of Britain was opened by George VI on 3 May and the Royal Festival Hall will be having a weekend of special events marking the Royal Festival Hall's birthday. The grade one listed building, one of the lasting monuments of the 1951 Festival of Britain, was then the largest new building since the war. It was also the first post-war building to be listed.

The Royal Festival Hall has an interactive exhibition about its history and future (see p5).

- Admission to the service on 5 April is by invitation only
- The Festival Bible, which was among the exhibits in 1951, will be at St John's.

Church Commissioners announce Octavia Hill estate consultation

THE Church Commissioners are consulting the community and parish on a new letting policy for their properties on the Octavia Hill estate behind The Cut.

The proposals include a programme of improvements and a move towards a mix of affordable and market rents.

In future the cottages and flats in Ufford Street and Mitre Road (which at present let on a combination of protected fair rents and assured shortholds some way below market levels) would be made available to key public service providers working in the local community such as bus drivers, teachers, nurses and police officers.

Not only would the market rents help finance the upgrade, but over time they will generate money for the support of the Church's social mission in SE1 in line with the Church Commissioners' aims and legal duty. Existing tenants' rights will be unaffected by the proposals

Octavia Hill, the 19th century housing reformer and National Trust founder, was invited by the Commissioners in the 1880s to manage their inner London rented housing estates in accordance with the progressive principles which she had pioneered.

Progress on new library for Waterloo

LAMBETH Council has formed a working group including community representatives to develop a new library for Waterloo.

The pre-fabricated Lower Marsh building closed after a health and safety report raised concerns about asbestos and wiring. The council is "exploring all opportunities for funding". "We are looking forward to working closely with the community" says Cllr Tony Goddard, Lambeth's member with responsibility for Libraries, who adds that he is determined to get a top quality library. Meanwhile the mobile library is continuing to visit Waterloo.

SE1 Snippets

21ST CENTURY SE1
SE1 scores well in The Independent's survey on 'the best places to be in 21st-century London'. 16% are in SE1 which is the highest score of any of the capital's districts. The SE1 list is: the London Eye, Tate Modern, NFT Movie Café, Waterloo International, the Design Museum, the London Aquarium, the Museum Of and the Millennium Bridge.

INTERNET@SOUTHWARK.INFO
Southwark Information Centre now has full internet access available. Following numerous requests from the public for internet and e-mailing facilities, the SIC has introduced an innovative internet terminal design based on the Southwark Needle next to London Bridge. Callers are welcome to have a look and try it out for themselves.

ST GEORGE'S CATHEDRAL
On Easter Monday St George's Cathedral marks the 60th anniversary of its devastating bombing. The original building was by Augustus Pugin. Representatives of a German town whose cathedral was also destroyed have been invited to a special service. Anyone with memories of that night is invited to contact Alex Scott on 020 7928 5256.

BRIDGET JONES'S DIARY
The long awaited film Bridget Jones's Diary is released this month. Scenes were shot in Bedale Street where the just reopened Globe pub features as a house. The new pie & mash shop was a taxi office. Also expected to feature is winewine opposite. The station entrance scenes were filmed on a specially built set behind the Globe.

book review

Morley New Writing

ONE of SE1's many centres of creativity is Morley College. From here comes Morley New Writing, sub-titled 'creative writing from creative people', and revealing the wealth of experience present in the area. The poetry and prose submissions for the book come from those involved in the College's Creative Writing courses. There is a poignant reminder of the ANZAC sacrifice, a description of an incident in Yeovil and a very effective five line poem about Tottenham Court Road Station. The judging panel has some justification for writing in the introduction: "All human life is here, as the News of the World used to claim, and it's better value for money!" The simple line drawings are by Fatma Durmush.

review*My Fair Lady at the National Theatre

MY Fair Lady is a tale of the social elevation of a working class flower seller into a lady of high society. Professor Henry Higgins (Jonathan Pryce) linguist and confirmed bachelor meets Eliza Doolittle (Martine McCutcheon) cockney flower seller and bets that in six months he can transform her from a "prisoner of the gutter" to a lady of class and distinction. Excellent singing, choreography, sparkling comical observations, lavishly detailed costumes and views of London blend together in this seamless Trevor Nunn production. McCutcheon is simply brilliant and carries the role well. Her interaction with Pryce is marvellous to watch. An enchanting production.

LOVERS of something different will enjoy the clothes at Twice the Siren ranging from Angels Exist T-shirts (£10.50), 50's cotton shirts (£34) to wonderful skirts and trousers fashioned from antique kimonos (from £42.50). An energetic mother of two, Caroline Scott owns and manages the shop. She designs some of the clothes as well as stunning semi-precious jewellery which requires regular trips to India. Even the building itself is unusual. A former opticians, it sports a giant pair of spectacles perched in surreal fashion above the shop. The shop and clothes are worth a look.

exhibition review

Goya at the Hayward Gallery

ON Goya's death in 1828, eight albums of drawings scattered. Now a hundred pages are back together, intimate with verbal asides; a veritable rollercoaster across humanity. Life's felt to be worth the ride, however precipitous with misfortune and misdeed. From times of carnivals and war, Goya looks out the truth; man takes a tumble but 'crying out will get you nowhere'. Faces described fleetingly, indelibly, in crayon or ink only reveal themselves, as handwriting does but this vision, illuminating his last 35 years as a deaf man, is unshakeably affectionate; a perspective 'come of age' to a Master, with ourselves the subject of our noblest endeavours. How pompous-pitiful! How human!

restaurant review

Auberge? Oh, Dear! Waterloo

WHEN we visited the Auberge Café Bar Restaurant in Sandell Street, there seemed to be a preponderance of courting couples more interested in eating each other than eating the food. I'm not surprised: my order took so long to arrive. I was ready to bite someone myself. The pleasant, but desperately inefficient, service is a real pity because the menu is imaginative and varied, although perhaps trying too hard with exotica like wild boar terrine and kangaroo steak. The wine list is middle of the road. The only thing that would tempt me back would be a sign saying 'Under New Management'.

comedy review

Live comedy in Southwark Street

THURSDAY Night is comedy night at the Shakespeare Tavern on the corner of Southwark Street and Southwark Bridge Road. In the intimate and warm surroundings of the Comedy Cavern you are treated to a feast of humour. Comic barbs are dispensed with style, wit, and flare and glide skillfully into a receptive audience with perfect timing. The excellent compering from Drew Barr and the comedy from Welsh/Jewish artist Bennett Arron and Northern stand-up Lee Mack was refreshing and dazzlingly entertaining peppered with lateral side-splitting observations, anecdotes and rib-tickling humour. If you're looking for sparkling talent and laugh-a-minute entertainment attend one of these uplifting events. I promise you won't be disappointed.

Southwark Festival promotes events throughout the year to entertain, educate or amuse

Southwark Festival: A growing community platform

Leading on from the success of our recent consultation exercises, Made in Southwark 2000, our ongoing relationship with local arts organisations and businesses such as Southwark Playhouse and St Martins Property Corporation, Southwark Festival has introduced more platform activities for Festival 2001.

These include Made in Southwark 2001 and a new event called Dance Space that is an opportunity for locally based dance groups to perform during the Festival.

We have also had confirmation of a new venue for our performance zone. Southwark Station on the Jubilee Line will be made available to school and youth music projects and bands.

Our recent development has seen the opening up of new opportunities for community organisations, artists, schools and other groups to feed into the Festival. However, there is always room for more. If you are a local arts organisation, artist, school or community group who require a space to show your work or a place to perform that new dance piece then your Festival wants to hear about it.

• Please send some information about you and your activities to Southwark Festival, 16 Winchester Walk, London SE1 9AQ.

BANKSIDE TRADERS' ASSOCIATION Update

2001-2 Officers & Committee Members

- Chair Robert Chappell

- Treasurer Guy Stanley
Borough Market

Executive Committee Members

Duncan Field (Field & Sons), Anne Radford (Management Consultant), Leigh Hatts (Bankside Press), Michael Maunsell (Bryan O'Connor and Co), James Niazi (Olley's Traditional Fish and Chips) Tony Lamb (G.L. Hearn) Steve Osborne (Safe Neighbourhoods Unit) Kelvin MacDonald (Bankside Restaurant) Christine Parkinson (Absolutely Starving)

AGM update

The AGM marked a giant leap forward for the BTA as it enters its first year with a Development Director and a busy programme. Robert Chappell, who has been unanimously re-elected Chair for a second year, outlined the enormous work which had taken place during Millennium Year when Bankside saw a huge leap in visitors and an influx of new businesses. Those elected to the Committee include Kelvin MacDonald whose Bankside Restaurant opened during the year. Among those present was Jeremy Rose who recently brought Feng Sushi to Borough Market's Stoney Street. As part of a policy of planning ahead, the AGM heard a talk by Michael Beaman, Chief Executive of the Bankside Business Partnership, on the Circle Initiative which is bringing investment to Bankside and the Borough. Cathedral Ward Councillor Hilary Wines provided an update on the London Bridge Tower proposals. The meeting took place in the new Library at Southwark Cathedral where members were welcomed by Rose Harding on behalf of the Dean. Afterwards there was a tour of the new conference facilities, shop and high-tech visitors' centre. Refreshments were provided by caterers Digby Trout who have won the contract for the new refectory which is open daily for meals.

Coming soon from BTA

BTA's next event will be on Thursday 19 April when speakers will explain how small businesses can be – and can benefit from being – environmentally friendly. Members will also hear about the plans for a greener Bankside.

The Association works to represent the interests of traders and small businesses in the Bankside, Borough and London Bridge areas. Membership costs £40 per year. The Association management group meets regularly and organises a number of events during the year.

in BRIEF

Belvedere Place
The Open Spaces Society is pressing Mayor Ken Livingstone to prevent SSW Council from closing Belvedere Place which links Borough and Southwark Bridge Roads. The OSS claims that the Council has made a draft order without waiting for a response to the consultation. "When we challenged the Council we were told that it was under pressure from the developer." says the OSS. "Such haste is unseemly and suggests undue influence on the Council by the developer."

Tower bid
The application to build Europe's tallest building in front of London Bridge Station has been submitted to Southwark Council. Already serious reservations about the 66-storey tower have been expressed by the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment.

Riverside trading
Southwark Council is holding a consultation on a proposal to allow trading on the riverfront at Bankside. Meanwhile, Lambeth's crackdown on illegal riverside traders has been welcomed by 79% of local people according to a poll at www.London-SE1.co.uk

Stanley Spencer
On Friday 6 April SE1 resident Carolyn Lucas is giving a talk at Tate Britain (not Tate Modern) on her personal recollection of painter Stanley Spencer (1pm; free).

Free vodka at the Tate
Absolut Vodka will be serving free Love Art cocktails during the evening on Saturday 28 April.

fish! for Brighton
The restaurant chain fish! which opened its very first branch in Borough Market in 1999 plans 22 new outlets during the next two years. Existing branches include Guildford and Birmingham in addition to the second branch in SE1 at County Hall.
