Congestion charge to reduce SE1 traffic

➔ 90 per cent discount for residents

THERE WILL be 34 checkpoints along the southern boundary of SE1 when the Congestion Charge is introduced on New Year's Eve next year.

The main entries will be Vauxhall, Kennington Road, Elephant & Castle, Great Dover Street and Tooley Street. Butler's Wharf is outside the £5 charge zone and Kennington Lane will be toll-free.

With the announcement of a consultation on the scheme, Borough Market trader Andrew Sugarman has asked for an exemption for all Borough Market Traders. However the charge will only be levied between 7am and 7pm on Mondays to Fridays.

It is expected that not only will traffic be cut by at least 15% but that the charge will raise £2000 million to invest in public transport. Bus fares are to be frozen at existing levels. Mayor Ken Livingstone describes the proposals as the "most comprehensive and ambitious plan to expand and improve transport that London has ever seen".

The £5 fee will allow visitors to SE1 to go in and out as many times as they wish in one day. A camera will read numberplates and trigger a debit to the credit card of registered drivers. Unregistered drivers will have until 7pm to pay at a shop agency or by phone.

SE1 residents are expected to be eligible for a 90% discount if entering the zone.

Those with disabled stickers will be exempt along with taxis, motorbikes, buses, Post Office vans, police cars and electric vehicles.

Estate agents in SE1 are predicting a further rise in property prices in the inner area as a result of the Congestion Charge. Agents Felicity J Lord at Tower Bridge likened the possible impact to the arrival of the Jubilee Line.

The Congestion Charge consultation period launched by Transport for London during last month is due to end on Friday 28 September. Information leaflets are available on 0800 0853939.

Tea and coffee museum closes

THE BRAMAH Tea and Coffee Museum on Butler's Wharf has suddenly closed having suffered a severe drop in visitor numbers this summer.

Whilst Tate Modern and the London Eye have had millions of visitors in a year the unique Tea and Coffee Museum claims to be a victim of development. When Edward Bramah opened his museum in 1992 behind the Design Museum the area was little visited but he attracted up to 3,000 visitors a month and in one year 30,000 people.

In 1997 the successful museum became a charitable trust. However, he says that in 1998 developers and builders moved in and with blocked roads the flow of visitors along Maguire Street ceased.

"Tourists just couldn't get through to us and attendance plummeted" says Edward Bramah, who has written definitive books on tea and coffee and spent 40 years planning the museum. He chose Butler's Wharf because of its long association with tea and coffee importing. Now the exhibits, including rare teapots and packaging, are in storage.

"We've proved the museum is popular" says the determined museum founder. "I think there is a genuine interest in the cultural and commercial heritage that has grown out of tea and coffee. Bankside is growing into a major tourist area and I would hope that Southwark would be keen to keep the museum. It's not too late to stay here but I need help to find premises."

between £6m and £8m for an urgent rebuilding of its architecturally renowned but rapidly disintegrating theatre in The Cut. Work is scheduled to begin on the project by 2003
with completion in 2005.Young Vic artistic director
David Lan admits the Arts Council's recent rejection of the theatre's £2.5m application has been a disappointment.
However, a special Arts Council award of £250,000 and a 57% increase in funding from the London Arts Board has helped to kickstart the theatre's fundraising efforts.Lan emphasises that the rebuilding of the 30-year-old temporary structure was a necessity rather than a luxury.
"The Young Vic is falling down.
We can close down or we can rebuild. It won't surprise anyone when I say we have got plans to rebuild. The Young Vic is too good an idea to give up on."He adds: "If we do nothing
we will have to spend £400,000
simply to keep the building open."

Unicorn Theatre at More London

THE UNICORN Theatre is to move to a modern purpose-built theatre in Tooley Street in 2005. Confirmation that the £11m plan will go ahead comes with the announcement that at least half the funding is already secured. The Arts Council grant will be £4.5m and the Pool of London Partnership has promised £1m. Unicorn is a children's theatre company founded just over 50 years ago and until recently based in Leicester Square. The new 350-seat theatre will be built near Potters Fields. In addition the Unicorn building will include rehearsal space, a gallery and a cafe.

Cathedral's new coat of arms

A new coat of arms can be seen on the huge flag flying over Southwark Cathedral. The shield has been designed by Hubert Chesshyre, Clarenceux King of Arms and a member of of the cathedral choir.

The need for a new grant of arms came after it was found that the arms in use were dubious says Clarenceux who is responsible for arms in England south of the River Trent.

The version of the old Southwark Priory arms being used by the cathedral differed from the recorded arms and turned out to be a family grant. The new grant of arms, with its cross of lozenges, resembles the priory shield. A white lily in the top right hand corner represents the Virgin Mary to whom the priory and cathedral have always been dedicated.

Most of the work was undertaken at the nearby College of Arms. Now the flag showing the arms and flown on special occasions can be clearly seen from the City and SE1.

All Beer and Skittles?

ONE OF the National Trust's most central properties is The George in Borough High Street. The Borough's galleried inn has an honoured place in All Beer and Skittles? A Short History of Inns and Taverns by EB Gibbons (NT £4.99). Having been built in 1677 it is older than many of the Trust's country houses. The author claims that The George offered an early example of home delivery since so many items bought in the City were sent off from there by coach. In the 18th century a wagon would leave every Wednesday evening for Tenterden in Kent arriving there two days later. By the early 19th century it catered for nearly one fifth of the carriers using Southwark inns. "At least seven coaches and a dozen wagons and endless carts and gigs, would go in and out of the two yards all day long." Charles Dickens was there. Michael Caldwell's photos show off Southwark's gem well.

GLA CITY HALL

The £4.7m GLA building was topped out last month in the presence of the Mayor of London and amid a row over the Mayor of Southwark. The developers More London failed to invite Hilary Wines to represent Southwark. The building, known by various names, including the headlamp, and due to open next year is to be called City Hall.

ARCHER OFFER

SE1 resident and author Jeffrey Archer now in Belmarsh Prison has been made an offer by the London Dungeon. The London Bridge attraction, is offering the peer a regular slot on its website. "We want to give a detailed account of life in prison" says a spokesperson claiming interest in British 21st century prison conditions.

Dr Faustus at the Rose

THE FIRST performance on the site of the Rose Theatre for nearly 400 years takes place at the end of this month with a staged reading of Dr Faustus. The theatre closed in 1606 having faced stiff competition from the Globe opposite. There will be four rehearsed readings with Anton Lesser as Faustus and Patrick Malahide as Mephistopheles. Janet Suzman will introduce the performance by the Lions part. The first night on Wednesday 29 August will be a charity event in aid of the Rose Theatre with champagne, canapés and a few surprises. Charity Night tickets cost £50 but tickets for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights are just £8. Bookings can be made on 020 7261 9565 between 10am and 5pm Mon-Fri.

scooterworks uk in Lower Marsh

MEMORIES OF Italian holidays and the sublime Audrey Hepburn in Roman Holiday are evoked by scooterworks uk. This unique shop sells secondhand Vespas and Lambrettas imported from Italy. The shop is the brainchild of Craig O'Dwyer and Fifi Fontavot who live in Southwark. They have a workshop at Tower Bridge where the scooters are re-conditioned. The main customers are commuters looking for easy ways of weaving through London's traffic and collectors. Apart from rainbow-coloured scooters there are artefacts and T-shirts for sale. You can also buy a good coffee made on a fabulous 1957 Faemo machine. This shop is a gem.

First performed as Le Malentendu in France in May 1944. This play by French Resistance member Albert Camus tells the story of Jan, who returns to the home, and the mother and sister he abandoned many years earlier. He keeps his identity secret at first, pretending to be a traveller from abroad. But the two women are determined to escape a life they both bitterly resent and have got into the habit of murdering guests for their money. A stark warning about the dangers of dissembling the truth and forsaking responsibility, in a series of taut confrontations which build to a devastating climax.

Isamu Noguchi at Design Museum

THE ROUND paper lantern and the light bulb make moons of a million ceilings and they're both brilliant inventions. This exhibition of the lantern's designer, Isamu Noguchi, shows his Japanese/American heritage with inspired shapes and surfaces dramatically staged by theatre director Robert Wilson. Unlabelled rooms bring textures underfoot, a wall of straw whispering sounds of consumerism and a Zen garden full of sculpture. 'Night Wind' is as enigmatic an evocation as haiku with its tensed granite rod making a temple of the elements. The settings enjoyably point up Noguchi's instinctive equations of nature and art; a bright spark 'twixt two wildly different countries'.

Refectory

THE REFECTORY at Southwark Cathedral is part of the new building. The restaurant is run by digby trout which is the new name for de Blank restaurants. Digby Trout himself is the managing director who believes "passionately that good simple food can be prepared in large quantities and served at reasonable prices". Prices are not cheap but they are reasonable for the quality. The menu is healthy with freshly prepared soups served with a range of bread and salads. Hot dishes include pasta and stir fries. There are also sandwiches and tempting pastries and puddings. A handy place for a large mug of cappuccino in the morning or tea in the afternoon.

Bankside Open Spaces Trust

BANKSIDE OPEN SPACES Trust has moved to new premises by the Library Street Housing Office. Fundraising has started to set up a community gardening resource centre with greenhouse, toolstore, community flower and vegetable beds and a garden. The charity works to improve and maintain the parks and open spaces in NW Southwark. It runs gardening clubs, organises events and supports local people with improving the parks. There is also a small grants scheme, sponsored by the Bankside Business Partnership, providing funds for window box and balcony gardens. (Deadline is mid September). To mark achievements so far the Trust is compiling a book about the parks and gardens. Those with memories should send them in by the end of the month.

in BRIEF

First for girls' choir
Composer Humphrey Clucas has written a setting for evensong canticles especially for Southwark cathedral's girls' choir. The offer came after the composer had heard the girls singing one evening in the cathedral. The première was last month and now the work will appear regularly in the both the girls' and boys' repertoire after the holidays.

More fish!

By the end of 2002 there will be at least 26 Fish! outlets across Britain. The foot and mouth crisis has led to more people eating fish. The first Fish! opened in Borough Market in 1999. Now there is one as far away as Birmingham. The second branch in SE1 is at County Hall and is fitted with a division bell to enable Members of Parliament to dine there.

Queen Mother
A 62 gun salute will be fired across the Thames from the Tower of London to mark the Queen Mother's 101st birthday at 1pm on Saturday 4 August. The salute is being fired by the Honourable Artillery Company who will be using for the final time the 25 Pounder ceremonial saluting guns that been employed since 1947. The City regiment's historic guns, now at the end of their service life, will be replaced by the Army's 105mm Light Gun in use elsewhere.

SURREY DISPENSARY

The 200 year old charity Surrey Dispensary offers grants each year to those in need, particularly to those with medical needs, but other needs are considered. It is a local charity covering Bermondsey, Rotherhithe, Walworth, North Southwark and Newington.

The Trustees invite you to offer their help to those known to you who are in need, applying to: Surrey Dispensary c/o St George the Martyr Vestry
