THE GOLDEN JUBILEE

SOUTHWARK JUBILATION

SE1's community Jubilee party is the Southwark Jubilation on Sunday 2 June in Borough Market.

Following the cathedral's main morning service there will be a pig roast in the adjoining market. An invitation has gone out to local performers to contribute to this special occasion.

Already taking part are bands, trumpeters, pipers, morris dancers, jugglers, human statues and Pearly Kings and Queens. There will also be Punch and Judy shows, poetry reading, fancy dress and dancing.

The main Cathedral Eucharists are at 11am, just before the party, and 6.30pm. A Songs of Praise service with Coronation music, celebrity readers and hymn requests is to be broadcast in the churchyard at 3pm.

The next day the focus moves to the Pool of London for gun salutes. On Bank Holiday Tuesday there is the State coach procession to St Paul's Cathedral. The severe traffic restrictions should result in a low pollution level in SE1.

• Those wishing to share their skills are being invited to contact organiser Sue Adams on 020 7367 6700 or email smadams@btinternet.com

JUBILEE TEA

St James's Teas in Blackfriars Road has blended a Jubilee Tea being sold in a blue tea caddy (40 teabags) for £3.50. www.teamail.co.uk

THE QUEEN AND SE1

The Queen has visited Southwark several times and is known to consider the cathedral to be 'beautiful'. Her Majesty distributed the Royal Maundy at the cathedral early in her reign and began Millennium evening by lighting the Southwark Millennium Candle in the cathedral before setting out from Bankside for the Dome. Dean Colin Slee has suggested to the Queen that she should drop in again to see the new building and courtyard opened since Millennium Night. Prince Philip was at the cathedral earlier this year.

MUSIC AT THE GLOBE

At Shakespeare's Globe on Bank Holiday Monday Peter Phillips is directing the Tallis Scholars in music from the Coronation of Elizabeth I. See Music.

LAMBETH PALACE

The Queen and Prince Philip will visit SE1 in the late afternoon on Thursday 6 June for a garden party at Lambeth Palace.

MBE FOR SE1'S JUBILEE MAN

John Hearn, Coin Street resident and a founder of the Colombo Street Centre, has received the MBE. He was invested at Buckingham Palace by Prince Charles following his inclusion in the last Honours List. John, who was living in SE1 during the Silver Jubilee, successfully campaigned for the new playground in Jubilee Gardens.

GUN SALUTE AT THE TOWER

The 49th anniversary of the Queen's Coronation will be marked on Bank Holiday Monday 3 June with a 62 gun salute at the Pool of London. The Honourable Artillery Company will fire from Tower Wharf at 1pm. Royal Salutes will also be fired at the same time on Monday 10 June for Prince Philip's Birthday and on Saturday 15 June for the Queen's Official Birthday. The viewing points are Tower Bridge and Potters Fields.

MASS OF THANKSGIVING

The 11.30am Sung Mass at St George's Cathedral on Sunday 2 June will be a Mass of Thanksgiving for Her Majesty's Golden Jubilee of Accession. The celebrant will be the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Southwark.

Sydney opera chief to revamp South Bank

SYDNEY OPERA HOUSE CHIEF, Executive Michael Lynch is to be head of the South Bank centre from September.

"I am thrilled to have been appointed to lead the SBC" says the new chief executive. "This is potentially the world's greatest arts centre."

Having masterminded a

£20m refurbishment in Sydney, Michael Lynch becomes the latest in a long list of high profile arts administrators to attempt a renewal of the South Bank facilities. His salary will be less than his German predecessor whose plans hit funding difficulties.

Bendy buses for Waterloo route

MERCEDES BENDY buses will be operating on the 507 Waterloo-Victoria route from Wednesday 5 June -the first working day after the Jubilee Holiday weekend.

Each 18 metre long articulated bus can carry 150 people who will enter any of three doors. The new service will be cashless to avoid unnecessary delays and during day at least 28 of the 31 new buses will be in service. Security measures include CCTV.

•Passenger figures for the new RV1 bus service are expected to show a slow start but a growing appreciation of the frequent service.

First Hungerford footbridge now open

THE FIRST of the two new footbridges alongside Hungerford Bridge has quietly opened to the public.

Mayor of London Ken Livingstone, who attended a reception to mark the completion of the upstream crossing, said: "This is a crucial crossing for London - that's why I decided to step in and help make it happen when the project was threatened two years ago. Improving access to London on foot is a priority. This crossing meets that need and gives Londoners another beautifully-designed bridge to add to a world-renowned collection."

The northern end steps are in Northumberland Avenue.

A History of the Jubilee Walkway

THE LONDON Silver Jubilee Walkway was launched 25 years ago to mark the Silver Jubilee.

Most of the signed route was along the river's south bank and the new waymarking highlighted how much of the river was inaccessible.

Walking east it was possible to stay by the water only as far as the new National Theatre frontage. Then the way was along Upper Ground passing under a link between two cold stores. Bargehouse Alley at the side of Oxo Wharf led to a heliport. The walker had to cross Blackfriars Road and go down steps on the site of the Express building to pass under railway arches.

The river was regained beyond Falcon Point. After London Bridge signs took the route along Tooley Street bypassing Hay's Wharf until Morgan Lane where there was the Pickle Herring ecological garden. Now the river route coincides with the Thames Path opened in 1996. A new Jubilee Walkway map-guide will be published shortly.

Discovering London for Families

THE RIVERSIDE of SE1 is constantly changing but the information in Peter Matthews' Discovering London for Families (Shire £9.99) is as up to date as can be possible. (Unfortunately the Tea and Coffee Museum has just moved west.) The author, who has strong SE1 connections with a base at the 'Blue Badge' guides' headquarters in Borough High Street, devotes six chapters to the South Bank, Bankside and the Pool of London. Indeed the cover picture is the Palace of Westminster seen from the South Bank. There are plenty of illustrations including a view of the South Bank from the London Eye. The descriptions of the City are equally interesting. Most of the attractions which will keep children absorbed are within walking distance of SE1 or, as with Greenwich, at least a boat ride away from Bankside.

FUTURE BRAND FOR BANKSIDE

The FutureBrand, the leading-edge branding firm with offices in 19 countries, is moving from over the river into the Piers Gough-designed Bankside Central on the corner of South and Great Suffolk Streets. The £45 per square foot rent is a Bankside record. The striking building was recently the subject of a major feature in The Independent.

THE RING REOPENS

The Ring pub, on the corner of The Cut and Blackfriars Road, is due to reopen in time for the Jubilee Holiday weekend. As we went to press final painting was taking place and framed pictures of former boxers were on the walls. The pub is named after a building on the Orbit House site opposite where boxing took place the early 1900s.

LAST CHANCE

The Waterloo Travelling Exhibition comes to a halt with its last showing at St Thomas' Hospital this month. The displays include information on more than 40 proposed projects in the Waterloo area and a range of street furniture. Views on the schemes, including any which visitors feel should have been included, can be given at the exhibition or by email

Borough Market (Southwark)

Deputy Market Manager - Salary Scale Starting £21K

The Borough Market was established by Act of Parliament in 1756 and is administered by 21 Trustees who have to live in close proximity to the Market. In 1999 it became a registered charity-No 1076940. The Market has just started a total refurbishment of its 4.5 acre site close to the southern end of London Bridge.

The Trustees now wish to appoint a Deputy Market Manager to fully participate in contributing towards the continuing expansion of the successful weekend Fine Food Market by assisting the Marketing Manager. Unsocial hours at weekends are a requirement of the position -with compensatory time off in week - and the ability to carry out manual tasks as well as office work in promoting the Market. Previous knowledge of Markets would be an advantage

Interested candidates should contact the market on 020 7407 1002 requesting an application form. Interviews will be held on Monday 1 July. Completed applications should be returned by Wednesday 19 June to The Director, Trustees of the Borough Market, 8 Southwark Street, London SE1 1TL.

Vincent in Brixton at the National

IN VINCENT in Brixton all is not as it seems at 87 Hackford Road. Enter Vincent van Gogh, a young art dealer seeking new lodgings. Within five minutes of trying to impress his landlady (played by Clare Higgins), to accept him as a tenant, Vincent reveals his blunt and tactless manner and at the same time declares his love for her daughter. Nicholas Wright's new play charting the plausible developments and early influences of Vincent van Gogh's life in London is a charming, strong and evocative drama entwined with profound sadness and humour. Superb casting of Jochum Ten Haaf as Vincent and impressive set design reminiscent of one of the familiar van Gogh paintings.

SITUATED BY Butler's Wharf Piazza, this unique shop is perfect for browsing on a Sunday afternoon. It has a small but stylish selection of everything from clothes, shoes, jewellery and body creams, to my personal favourite - bags! And then there are the knick-knacks which include postcards, wrapping paper - it goes on and on...During my visit, people of all ages and nationalities were happily checking out the bargains, which are aplenty (handmade necklaces and bracelets from £9 and bags from £15). Though slightly biased toward females, Hide All screams creativity in all shapes, sizes and colours.

Gio Ponti at the Design Museum

PERHAPS THE Italians are uniquely undaunted by ambition but Gio Ponti's prolific output over six decades encompassed every facet of art, interiors and architecture and was a major force in establishing Italy at the forefront of 20th-century industrial design. Essentially an architect, he also promoted others: his own highly influential journals 'Domus' and 'Stele' were a window on to the world's latest, most vibrant visual ideas and bore witness to his own incessant growth and reinvention. Whatever the building material it was the art which made it durable and timeless, leading Ponti to declare that "the past does not exist because I consider everything in our culture to be simultaneous".

Powerstation Café Gallery

THE SPIRIT of Arnhem Land, an intimate photographic portrait of Aboriginal people in a remote region of Australia, hangs on the wall of the this café gallery. Although the exhibitions are multi-cultural, and the coffee is cappuccino (£1.50), the café is part of a small Chinese Cultural Centre. Vegetable soup and bread or chicken soup with pasta (£3.50) and hot ham, cheese or bacon panini (£3.80) are available along with tea (£1.20) and milk shakes (£2). Diners may notice the subtle colour projection on the white wall and this facility may be used in future in the evenings for soirées and talks.

Elephant Angels at Blackfriars

ELEPHANT ANGELS is a project being delivered in the Elephant & Castle area by Prospects and Blackfriars Settlement. It is unique in its scope and ambition. The aim is to create a team of paid and volunteer advocates who will be working with and within the local community on a one to one basis. The advocates will work with people to create pathways towards fulfilling personal development. The advocates will engage with people, devise personal solutions and provide continuing support for clients who are seriously affected by unemployment, debt, ill health, social and language barriers and various other social issues. The Angels will be based in two sites. They are already up and running at Blackfriars Settlement and are soon to move in to the Heygate Estate. Phone calls are welcome.

Friday 21 June
SENSE AND THE CITY CONCERT
5.45pm & 8pm; 40p platform ticket or Travelcard
Site-specific music 'Line Up' commissioned and played by the London Sinfonietta will resonate around Richard MacCormac's Southwark Underground Station. The piece consists of fanfares written for each of the stops on the Jubilee Line. Experience the high space and surprising church-like acoustic of Southwark Underground's blue glass-clad concourse transformed by fleeting orchestral sounds relayed via the public address system, combined with live performances by brass and woodwind instruments. Composer Fraser Trainer, together with composers and sound engineers Ian Dearden and David Sheppard, has created a work which fits the majestic dimensions of the new station. Fraser Trainer speaks at Tate Modern between performances. See Talks listing on back page.

Online Polls

After the recent news story about the row between the British Legion and the owners of County Hall, we asked whether Shirayama should allow the veterans access to the war memorial - 94% said yes, with 3% saying no and 3% undecided.

Followers of the discussion in the London SE1 Forum will also be aware of transport for London's planned alterations to the Bricklayers Arms junction. 43% were delighted with the news, whilst another 43% would rather bulldoze the whole thing and put the road underground. Unsurprisingly no-one agreed with the statement "I like it how it is at the moment", but 14% claimed that they couldn't care less!

We asked visitors to London-SE1.co.uk whether they were in favour of the Aga Khan's plans for a cultural centre next to St Thomas' Hospital. 38% said yes and 62% said no.

We followed up the long-running debate in our forum about Champor-Champor, the Malay-Asian restaurant, by asking whether visitors had dined there. 29% said yes, with a whopping 57% intending to pay a visit!

The new RV1 Riverside bus was also under scrutiny. 14% say they'll use it for commuting, with 86% intending to use it for leisure travel.

The distinguished poet, novelist and critic – whose books include The Savage God (a study of suicide with particular reference to his friend Sylvia Plath), Poker (a game at which he is an acknowledged world expert) and his recent autobiography Where Did it All Go Right? – talks about his writings and his life (advance booking advised).

Thursday 13 JuneJEAN (HANS) ARP

6.30pm; £3 (conc £1)
John Calder talks about the Life and Work of Dadaist and Surrealist Jean Arp. Born in Alsace under German rule but working mostly in Paris, Arp was a major 20th-century painter and sculptor whose solid but flowing shapes are instantly recognisable. His writings in both German and French are contemporary classics. Accompanied by readings by actors and followed by a discussion.
