This tiny mouse is hidden at the base of a new sculpture on Waterloo Station's main concourse. The sculpture by Philip Jackson commemorates artist Terence Cuneo and was unveiled by the Princess Royal last month. Cuneo was well-known for his habit of incorporating a mouse in each of his works.

Borough barber to repeat Brighton barrow push

BOROUGH Market barber Mike Hobbs is to push a market barrow from Brighton to London. The event is inspired by the memories of potato porter Bill Spring who recalls competing with porters from Covent Garden and Spitalfields in 1962.

Originally the race was from Borough to Brighton but this time Mike and ten friends have decided to reverse the route. They are leaving Brighton at 4am on Sunday 7 November and aim to be at the market by early evening.

The 1962 time was 11 hours 13 minutes but the 2004 team is not expecting to break the record. Although Mike is a former marathon runner, Bill Spring and his colleagues were active athletes and boxers.

A big welcome is planned at the Market Porter which will have the original silver trophy on display. Donations are being invited to the Evelina Children's Hospital Appeal at Guy's Hospital in honour of the event.

Lotto live at Tate Modern

THE National Lottery's 10th birthday celebrations are to be held at Tate Modern with the first ever National Lottery Day on Saturday 6 November.

Tate Modern's riverside forecourt will showcase performances by an array of Lottery-funded talent and a Good Causes maze will also tell the personal stories of some of the many thousands of grant recipients. Matthew Pinsent's Olympic gold medal will be among the attractions.

A spectacular light show is planned for the evening when the National Lottery draw will be broadcast live from Tate Modern along with the first ever Helping Hand Awards. The draw will include a £10 million jackpot-only Birthday Draw.

Arts and Lottery Minister Estelle Morris commented: "The National Lottery has raised an amazing £16 billion for good causes, and provided funding to more than 175,000 projects across the UK.

"It has also helped to transform thousands of lives. Large-scale projects like the Eden Project are a spectacular example of this, but so are many of the smaller, community based projects that help communities across the UK.

"So it's great to see so many Lottery funded projects joining in the 10th Birthday celebrations by throwing their doors open to the public and hosting their own special events in November and over the Birthday weekend."

Dianne Thompson, Chief Executive of Lottery operator Camelot, said: "We are thrilled to be staging the 10th Birthday celebrations at Tate Modern. We hope these will not only be tremendous fun, but will also remind people of all the many thousands of good causes, the length and breadth of the UK, that have benefited from Lottery funding."

Installation art out, painting in

THE Saatchi Gallery at County Hall will be cleared of installation art by such artists as Damien Hirst and Tracey Emin and filled instead with the more traditional medium of painting.

Opening in January, The Triumph of Painting will mark the gallery's 20th anniversary (though it has only been on the South Bank since 2002) and will feature established painters Martin Kippenberger, Peter Doig, Marlene Dumas, Luc Tuymans, Jorg Immendorff and Hermann Nitsch.

Announcing the radical change, millionaire collector Charles Saatchi declared that painting, and not the video, installations, or photography favoured by the Young British Artists, was the most effective medium.

Saatchi said: "For the last ten years, only five of the 40 Turner Prize artists have been pure painters. "We think it's time for a painting survey, looking at established international artists and later on in the year, the younger new young painters."

County Hall's wood panelling will be refurbished with white screens and its rooms will be re-designed to make space for larger paintings. Works by Emin, Hirst, the Chapman brothers and Sarah Lucas will not return to the South Bank until 2007, after a probable international tour.

Environment prizes for SE1 schools

CHARLES Dickens Primary School and St Saviour's & St Olave's Secondary School have each been awarded cash prizes of £2,000 in recognition of their environmental work.

The award is a three year challenge to schools, organised by the Mayor of London and Capital Standards, to develop children's responsibility towards the environment.

The event was a chance to celebrate the success of some of the projects that pupils have been involved in - from designing and planting apple and pear orchards to compiling waste and energy audits in their schools. Pupils took part in an interactive environmental quiz, played music with instruments made from scrap and got a chance to make their own adverts to promote recycling.

Prizes were also handed out to children who used the Golden Bin, placed in their school playground, to dispose of their litter responsibly.

Mayor of London Ken Livingstone said: "I would like to commend the hard work of all the schools in the borough which took part in the first year of the London Schools Environment Awards and look forward to seeing them further their knowledge of the environment in the second year of the scheme."

Simon's skyscraper summit

BANKSIDE Residents Forum is hosting a special meeting at the request of Simon Hughes MP to discuss plans for a cluster of towers in Bankside.

There are at least six proposals for tall buildings between Blackfriars Road and Park Street. A 34-storey building, higher than the Tate Modern tower, is part of a Land Securities plan for the site next to Christ Church. Land Securities is also planning a tower behind the nearby 18th-century Hopton's Almshouses.

Chelsfield last month unveiled plans for 24-storey building on the corner of Park Street and Sumner Street.

Meanwhile the House of Lords is to give a ruling on the controversial tower opposite Bankside Lofts in Hopton Street where there are already plans for a replacement for empty Samson House. There is also uncertainty over the vacant site at 10 Blackfriars Road which Sainsbury's has put on the market. Ludgate House opposite was partially vacated last month when Express Newspapers moved to the City.

The meeting is due to discuss the effect of a rise in population on medical, leisure and school facilities as well as roads.

•The BRF meeting, open to residents of Bankside, is on Wednesday 3 November at 7pm in Tate Modern.

•The Diocese of Southwark's new Adviser on Regeneration, the Revd Tim Scott, has been inducted as Rector of Christ Church Blackfriars Road. Most of the proposed developments are in Christ Church parish.

Royal Festival Hall closure plans announced

181 JOBS will be lost when the Royal Festival Hall closes for major refurbishment in July next year.

The concert hall will be closed until January 2007 although it is planned to continue much of the performance programme in the Queen Elizabeth Hall and Purcell Room, with a full exhibition schedule at the Hayward Gallery.

Work is already underway on the Royal Festival Hall transformation, with the refurbishment of level 1 on the riverside and the creation of a new building alongside Hungerford Bridge on target.

South Bank chief executive Michael Lynch

has admitted that he would consider changing the name of the Royal Festival Hall to incorporate a sponsor's brand name. "We might have some doubts about becoming the McDonald's Hall, but have to be open to ideas. We have to consider a sponsor becoming part of the name," he told The Observer last month.

NEW GALLERIES
SE1 has two more new art galleries. Laura Bartlett Gallery has opened in Bermondsey's Leathermarket Street. In Ayres Street's Flat Iron Yard there is now Full Circle. The launch shows are a Sachiko Abe installation at Laura Bartlett Gallery and a collection of recently completed seascape paintings by Catherine Middleton, at Full Circle.

NEW PRIEST
Desrene Swaby from St George the Martyr in Borough High Street was one of eleven new priests ordained in Southwark Cathedral by the Bishop of Southwark. St George's congregation is preparing for its last Christmas in the historic building before a long closure during 2005 and 2006 for vital restoration work.

NEW RESTAURANT
Roast, a restaurant serving fresh British food, is to open next year in Borough Market's Floral Hall. Iqbal Wahhab, who has made his reputation with the Cinnamon Club in Westminster, is masterminding the new venture. The Floral Hall has views down into Park Street and across to St Paul's dome. Roast is being previewed at next month's BBC Good Food Show.

FREE GUIDED WALK
The SE1-based City of London Guide Lecturers Association is giving free guided walks on Lord Mayor's Show Day Saturday 13 November. The walks start from No 1 Poultry (opposite Mansion House) at 3pm. The route is along the lanes and alleys around Cheapside and Paternoster Square including newly returned Temple Bar.

London: The Photographic Atlas

THERE was great interest earlier this year when Collins published the Getmapping photographic map of the Thames which included riverside SE1. Now Collins has produced a brand new edition of London: The Photographic Atlas (£60). Central London has been completely re-flown and Waterloo can be seen in breathtaking sharpness in the new superscale section. All SE1 is shown at the 1:300 scale. Tate Modern's tower casts an interesting shadow as does the IPC tower. The area between these two landmarks is due to have five new tower blocks including one higher than the Tate. Those discussing the future of Bankside should look at this map. The lush greenery seen on the corner of Hatfields and Meymott Street has already been cut down for a hard surface. This is an important book for those who love London and care about the future of SE1.

The Censor Union Theatre

BIRMINGHAM'S newest professional theatre group The Other Theatre Company has chosen to stage its first production at SE1's Union Theatre. The Censor by controversial playwright Anthony Neilson, written in 1997, tells the story of Miss Fontaine, a producer of pornographic films, and her attempts to seduce the man holding the Censor's scissors, whilst also convincing him of the artistic merit of her extremely graphic porn film. The play is most famous for a scene in which Miss Fontaine fulfils the Censor's sexual fantasy by defecating in front of him. "It would be easy to make a scene like that seem seedy," says artistic director Derek Bond "Our challenge is to make it beautiful." The Company's aim is to produce work by the best living British writers.

shopping focus

Lituanica Railway Approach

A NEW Lithuanian grocers is hidden in Railway Approach at London Bridge. It's sandwiched between the betting shop and La Spezia and very near Borough Market.

Most shoppers are Lithuanian and others are often Polish Londoners buying the large Polish salami (£7). There is plenty of fish and especially herrings which come in many packages including old fashioned jars. A ready meal is herring fillet with stewed vegetables and paprika (£2.49). Interesting cheeses include dried curd cheese.

A range of unusual biscuits (49p), honeycakes (65p a pack), bread and sweets are at very reasonable prices. The honey in jars (£3.10) is organic. The bottles of bean, mushroom and tomato soups (99p) will feed at least three people. The apple juice (£3.20) is worth it for large clear glass jar. A surprise is the Lithuanian ice cream (50p). The shop is a welcome addition to SE1. The other branch is in Dublin.

Time Zones
Tate Modern

TIME Zones is the Tate's first major film and video exhibition. The first film, just inside the entrance, is the most extraordinary. In 11 minutes two bored young boys in a bank cubicle start to perform what appears to be a traditional Kurdish wedding dance.

Another sequence shows artist Bojan Sarcevic walking through the alleys of Bangkok. Here are streets the tourists rarely see. But suddenly a passage looks familiar. You are tempted to watch it again to check if he has been walking in a circle.

An outstanding installation is the 12 hour film of Mexico City's central plaza on a very hot day. Wolfgang Staehle provides a live feed of a monastic building in Germany. During this exhibition we should see the trees change colour and maybe snow fall. So it is a pity that Times Zones is not free.

The Living Space
Waterloo Road

THE Living Space is tucked away at the southern end of Waterloo Millennium Green and is an excellent place to grab a good-value lunchtime snack. Hot soup and a roll costs just £1. A range of sandwiches is available, or you could opt for a jacket potato, toasted sandwich (served with salad garnish) or a panini. Fair trade chocolate is also featured prominently. Cappuccinno is excellent value at just £1.

The balcony above the cafe offers computers with internet access (50p for half an hour). The whole building has wireless internet access, but frustratingly using your own laptop is more expensive than using one of the Living Space's PCs (£2.25 for 90 minutes).

A live display shows how much power is being produced by the photovoltaic panels on the roof; the system was installed by Lower Marsh-based Solarcentury.

Southwark Rooms

A NEW club night launches on Tuesday 9 November, promising to bring regular, top quality jazz to SE1. Jazz Duos at Southwark Rooms has been dreamt up by Brigitte Beraha, an acclaimed recording artist and regular performer at London's top jazz venues. The evening begins with an hour-long set from Brigitte Beraha, accompanied by pianist Barry Green. The two will play a mix of familiar jazz standards and original, lesser known tunes. For the second half of the evening, musicians from the audience will be invited to showcase their skills, accompanying the house pianist in improvised duos. Any willing musicians are invited turn up on the night with their instruments and book a fifteen-minute slot. Vocalists are also welcome. Those who want to play are advised to arrive early.

The organisers want the night to be accessible to the untrained jazz ear, as well as hardened aficionados.

- 60 Southwark Street
- £3 (£2 for performing musicians)

Sunday 14 November REMEMBRANCE DAY

4pm; free
Mark Rylance hosts Globe's annual commemoration of civilian casualties from conflicts past and present. The programme will include readings and music by Globe actors, musicians and staff. In tribute to civilians who have perished during all conflicts, names of casualties will be read out throughout the afternoon and commemorative candles lit. Entrance is free but everyone is encouraged to make a donation to either the Royal British Legion or the Peace Pledge Union. To cover the Globe's expenses, mulled wine, spiced juice and cakes will be on sale. The afternoon concludes with a walk from Shakespeare's Globe to the Tibetan Peace Garden at the Imperial War Museum where a remembrance rope will be laid and a prayer for peace spoken.

Saturday 27 and Sunday 28 November SOUK

10am-5pm; free
Shakespeare's Globe Exhibition will play host to an exotic souk showcasing contemporary arts which draw inspiration from Islamic traditions. Visitors will be able to see how work is produced and buy from the stallholders. The Souk itself will be designed by graduate students and alumni from the Prince's School of Traditional Arts. Throughout the weekend these artists will work in the UnderGlobe giving an insight into the living tradition of Islamic art. The students will demonstrate how the principles of calligraphy, geometry and islami or arabesque are applied in painting, woodwork, ceramic tiling and stone and plaster carving. Entry to the exhibition will be free for the whole weekend, so visitors can experience the souk and enjoy the permanent collection in the UnderGlobe at the same time.
